VANCOUVER - Election excitement is mounting here and the issues are emotionpacked . . . but very simple.

Everyone talks about the election in terms of the four provincial leaders.

Everything else is fluff, fluff, fluff, and blah, blah,

In the downtown core where more than 70 per cent of the population lives in apartments and there are few children on the streets, the New Demo-crats and Social Credit parties are locked in a head-tohead battle.

Barring a rural upheaval, the NDP has to win the two-seat ridings of Vancouver-Burrard and Vancouver-Centre if it hopes for a majority government.

social Credit won both ridings in 1969, by 300 votes in Vancouver-Burrard and more than 1,000 votes in Vancouver-

OTTAWA (CP) — The fed- illuminimum illuminimum eral government said today it is suspending the use of the controversial drug- DES in cattle pending the further investigation.

The health and agriculture departments, said that the drug, widely used to promote the growth of cattle, will be suspended effective Jan. 1.

The United States recently banned the use of the drug because it has caused cancer in rats. Canada did not immediately follow suit.

The Canadian action came after a non-governmental group made the rather confusing conclusion that there is no danger to health from DES. but there is a potential for harm from its use It recommended additional experimental information on it and that is the reason for the suspension from Jan. 1. The U.S. ban is effective Jan. 1 also.

Vancouver Port Remains Idle

VANCOUVER British Columbia longshoremen have voted 93.1 per cent in Tayor of striking in support of con-tract demands but union pokesmen say ne immediate walkout is planned.

Talks between the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and he B.C. Maritime Employers' Association are scheduled to resume today. Talks were held last Friday but no progress was reported.

Participating in the strike vote were dock workers from mo, Port Alberni, Prince Rupert and New Westminster.

The port of Vancouver re-mained idle during the weekend as the 1,800 Jongshoremen there held firm in their dispufe with employers over a local issue involving hiring

Judge Hart expressed some Interest in that proposition.

Under U.S. law, natural gas can not be released into the air not flared.

It could be disposed of by pumping it underground but his is a temporary solution only as the pumping can continue for only a maximum of one year. After that, production of both oil and gas must be halted, according to U.S.

Said Anderson: "It is too early to tell how this thing will go and the comments of Judge Hart show that he is not entirely sympathetic with our arguments but his com-ments on the natural gas study are very interesting. It ives us reason to hope."
Only lawyers were permitted to address the hearing but Anderson kept firing memos to his lawyer Berlin and to lawyers for Alaska fishermen and environmental groups opposing the pipeline.

Among those defending the pipeline are the oil company and the State of Alaska.

An earlier bid by Anderson to be represented was rejected by Judge Hart but Anderson appealed and won the right to be represented.

To build for the future one must have foundations on which to stand. At the last provincial election the Liberal Party polled 21% of the votes cast. This bedrock of support places us in a favourable position in the present contest. As the free enterprise alternative to the present government we confidently ask for your support. Between now and August 30th we will be placing before you the detailed proposals for British Columbia in general and the City of Victoria in particular. We ask that you consider carefully the positions we have taken on the matters which affect us all as British Columbians and residents of the City of Victoria.

U.S. War on Heroin Proves Tough Task

NEW YORK - The worldwide American war on opium growing and heroin-smuggling promises to be at least as protracted, and perhaps as in-conclusive, as the conflict in

As an awareness of the dithe effort mensions spreads, officials are begining to scale down their expectations. There is less talk of burning the world's poppy fields. The emphasis now on disrupting supply routes, pinching the flow of heroin into this country and, by reducing availability on the street, perhaps reducing experimentation by young Americans.

It was not always so. A year ago, after announcing that Turkey had agreed to suppress opium cultivation, President Nixon spoke of a "significant breakthrough." Since Turkish opium was thought to account for 80 per cent of the heroin injected by American addicts, some ad-ministration officials appeared to think that the rest of the struggle would be

The clutter of roof signs will be no more, and standards will be set for permitted signs.

The ultimate result, if Council stands by its decision of Thursday and gives final reading to the amendments, will be a much better appearing city-scape and a better public reception of the signs that remain. There will be a three-year period within which signs must be made to conform.

Indications from Ontario are that, at least within that province, labor and the New Democratic Party are weighing their mutual ties. According to a report in The Globe and Mail, the Ontario NDP has set up a committee to review the relationship between the party and labor. The immediate cause of this reassessment is the Waffle, the ultra-left wing and nationalistic element of the NDP gathered around Professors James Laxer and Mel Watkins.

There is growing support within the Ontario Waffle for a reply to the Orillia purge last June (which curtailed public activities of the militants) by forming a committee for an independent socialist Canada outside the party structure. The committee members, who would also retain NDP membership, would let the party fight its electoral struggles alone and, in effect, stand by to move in if the federal party under Mr. David Lewis should do poorly in the next election.

Increasingly in Ontario, the divisions within the NDP seem to resemble a fight between the Waffle and the union leaders. The prize appears to be not so much possession of the party structure as the loyalty of the average union man. The NDP middle in Ontario is being fractured by the internecine

Maritime provinces, a topic of heated though largely academic discussion since the earliest days of Confederation, may be a practical political option within the

During the last year and a half, cooperation among Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island been developing at a pace which could lead to some form of regional government.

None of the Maritime premiers is sold on the idea of outright political union, the major recommendation of a report commissioned by the three provinces and released in November, 1970. However, they have enthusiastically endorsed the development of a number of regional services, ranging from a Maritime police training academy to a single system for distributing educational grants.

Alternatives

"Within six or seven years, the stage will have been reached where we will either have to set up some form of regional government or else remain content with a limited amount of inter-provincial co-operation," says a senior civil servant co-ordinating the integrated planning.

Such a regional government, according to the official, would be a type of "mini-Common Market." Each province would retain its autonomy, while a joint council of legislators would meet regularly to work out agreement on certain joint regional activities.

"We will have to make a decision on way or the other on a type of regional government before the decade is out,' the official added.

For the time being, the Maritime premiers are refusing to speculate publicly about regional administration, while actively co-operating on regional pro-

A progress report prepared by the council last month listed a dozen fields in which the groundwork for regional cooperation has been laid.

Other integrated services, already in operation, include a Maritime Land Information and Registration Service which is involved in surveying, mapping, and the Maritime Resource Management Services. The latter department provides support services for the management of natural resources.

Both charge fees to provinces making use of the services, in addition to federal assistance which underwrites 50 per cent of the cost.

The Council of Maritime Premiers is also co-ordinating studies on tourism, agriculture and economic development pol-

Apart from the benefits of co-ordinatservices which were excessively costly for the three Maritime provinces to maintain separetly, the region has been able to take common stands when dealing with the federal government.

Regan Most Hesitant

Similar legislation on succession duties and gift taxes has been passed in all three legislatures.

Of the three premiers, Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia is the most hesitant. This is likely because of dissent within his own Liberal administration, and his belief that Nova Scotia - for a so-called "have not" province - is relately better off than the rest.

Mindful of recent oil discoveries off the Nova Scotia coast, Mr. Regan noted recently that, "... we have a good chance of breaking through and becoming a 'have' province."

New Brunswick's French-speaking Acadians are also suspicious of the growing co-operation among the three Maritime provinces. Many fear that the Maritime premiers are laying the ground work for regional government. JAMES RESTON The Aftermath of Eagleton Democratic party's Vice Presidential nominee is now hitting those who advocated his withdrawal, and it adds up to a powerful political force.

Judging by the torrent of mail that has come into this office in the last few days, there are many voters in both parties who have been under psychiatric treatment themselves or observed it in members of their families, and regard the dumping of Eagleton as insensitive. unjust and unscientific.

On the whole, these are well-written and deeply felt letters, which say in effect that Sen. McGovern has not only passed judgment on Eagleton but on all persons who have received psychiatric treatment for mental depression

Stigma

Usually they do not draw distinctions between the responsibilities of ordinary citizens and the responsibilities of candidates for the Vice Presidency, or between people who have had routine psychiatric treatment and those who have undergone electric shock treatment for extreme mental depression.

What they are saying mainly is that McGovern and everybody else who agreed with him in the Eagleton case have put a stigma on all psychiatric patients, cast doubt on their reliability, and shut them off from the highest offices in the land.

This is not only expressed with strong passion, but is often followed with the observation that McGovern's conclusion would have ruled out of high office men like Abraham Lincoln and Winston Churchill. And this in turn is followed by the promise to vote for President Nixon as a rebuke to McGovern. A doctor from the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Columbia University writes: "What is so unusual about a temporary psychological depression in an intense, capable, ambitious young man? . . . What is unusual in this case is that Senator Eagleton had the insight and the courage to recognize this promptly, and equally promptly to find effective treatment.'

A professor of history at the Universi-a test of Presidential and Vice-Presidential candidates before a medical board. "If we assume that your test could be devised," the professor writes, "who would pass it? Robert M. LaFollette, whom the Senate a few years ago judged one of its five greatest members, and Ben B. B. Lindsay, the ploneering juvenile judge of Denver, would fail .

"Abraham Lincoln, whom historians

Harding suffered from acute depression at times, and Coolidge's sadism would have disqualified him. F.D.R., Eisenhower, and Johnson obviously collapsed . . . so where are we? Since 1912, only Hoover might have

I believe that the country is in such sad shape, that cynical contempt for Government and politicians is so rampant, that we urgently need leaders of wisdom and compassion. We don't need any more panderers to the 'normal' and 'sane' course: they are the politicians who have produced our problems . . .

A Presbyterian minister from Rochester, N.Y. compalins that many people who desperately need psychiatric help refuse to seek it precisely because of the fear of the kind of criticism made of Eagleton by the press. "The sign of both mental and spiritual maturity," he says, "is a willingness to seek help rather than bulling one's way through a situation, leaving the wounded and hurt on every side. Columns such as yours and the editorial policy of your paper make such courage even more invaluable and rare ...

Constant Theme

A woman writing from Ruvigliana, Switzerland, strikes probably the most constant theme of these letters: "It is painful enough to cope with this fairly mysterious ailment. I speak as the mother of a young woman who has now made a fine recovery but is constantly confronted with the question of revealing her off-and-on record of hospitalization a decade ago. But it is infinitely more painful to cope with the automatic responses of those who make no effort to discover what is known of this area . . ."

It is risky, of course, to draw general conclusions from letters to newspapers. Usually, it is the people who think you wrong who write, but even allowing for this, the reaction to the Eagleton case is unusual. It is overwhelmingly critical of McGovern, and deeply emotional, personal, and political.

Accordingly, despite all the cries for unity and reform at the nomination of Sargent Shriver as Tom Eagleton's successor, the Democratic campaign has obviously been hurt. These are not the letters of people who are likely to forget in November, for many of them regard McGovern's decision as a judgment on Your review of the Glasgow Phoenix Choir performance by reporter Wayne Harding was, for the most part, accurate and as complimentary as we have come to expect for even the most outstanding displays of talent. However it seemed to me that his criticism was shaded with an uncontrollable jealousy that he himself was not included in the chauvanistic rapport betwixt choir and audience.

His reference to everyone there speaking in English accents suggests that Mr. Harding does not know the several true and beautiful Scottish accents when he hears them.

It is not all that different with the young. Those who believe in something, who have a positive approach, can usually be trusted to survive the school and peer group contact with harmful drugs. They are unlikely to go far in this direction, since in fact drugs do not offer anything like as much excitement or reward as a challenging experience in living and learnchallenging

Because it must be faced that drug use may for a short time give release from the fears and insecurity that threaten us all today.

Children use them because they like them.

Adults consult their doctors, for expensive holidays, visit restaurants and night clubs, and pop their own varieties of pills, all to make life more bearable or pleasant. Drugs simply offer a more effective release at higher risk.

Failure to understand this and accept it as fact will hamper any parent's attempt applying successful preventive measures. As always, parents who need help the

The best area for parents to There are no efficient cures a program that has a high vention does not have to do with drugs. A great deal of laughter in a home is worth more in this direction than a lot of drug charts, with attendant lectures.

Parents who have love to spare, children who trust their parent or parents, who know who they are and where they stand in the home, will be the most resistant to drug

The best orientation for a child is a happy parent. In many cases, if a parent la-vished as much attention on herself or himself as he or she does on the youngsters, there would be a better balance achieved in that family. It is no sin to be selfish so long as members of the family have equal rights. + + +

Very often a man who sup-ports his family in a job that he dislikes, on the principle of duty to the family, is a hard husband and father to live with. Very often all might be happier if he worked in ng he could be proud of for less money.

You might be able to avoid drug use by your children by changing your job!

If you see your youngsters as threatened by an outside society gone mad, and a world without the moral values in which you believe, still you can live yourself by those values and keep them whole and strong in your house. If they are right, and they work, your children will be the first to recognize the fact.

Do a lot of picnics and camping if you can. Talk a lot at the dinner table.

If there are two parents in a family, make sure you always work together — if Junior can get a yes from mother father has already said no, then you're in trouble crafty children can divide you up and conquer.

Again, real life is more challenging and exciting than the drug world. You can beat the drug problem by showing children that you have thing a lot better to offer.

And, just incidentally, you'll find yourself a very happy and proud parent.

Spokesmen for all three parties say they expect to have the leader on the road within about 10 days of the calling of the election. If that happens, it means an election which is absurd in that it is as carried out by train and there

He's Teaching Freedom

In Latin America, few areas are deeper sink holes of poverty than northeast Brazil. Hunger, illiteracy and disease have beaten down the defeated poor with daily cruelties, and all the while the military regime talks up the need for industrial development and tighter police security. Few have gone into the backlands of northeast Brazil to work and fewer still have stayed to

Among the latter, Paulo stands out. Working the rural villages, Freire taught reading and writing among illiterate adult pea-He discovered that the conditions of poverty passed from parents to children less because of inherited ignorance or lethargy than cause the poor often fear free-

So often do they hear that they are good for nothing and are incapable of learning anything — that they are sick, lazy and unproductive - that in the end they become convinced of their own unfitness.'

Freire's work is gaining recognition in the United States, though he runs the risk of being glamorized by the counter-culture hip as an-other third world messiah come to save the masses. Freire has pulled in fat lecture fees in New York but he has backed away from having thought packaged into cocksure slogans like Illich's "deschooling society."

A Difficult Book

Instead, and perhaps purposely to ward off panhandle followers, Freire's major work, "Pedagogy of the Oppressed" (Herder and Herder), is a difficult, dry and slow book. One reading is cles on Freire are appearing agrarian reform of Chile who

Freire was released after 70 days and took exile in Chile From 1964 to 1969, he worked in the villages and is credited with awakening much of the country's sleeping political potential. Currently, Freire, 52, works in Geneva as head of the educational division of World Council of

A basic theory of Freire is that education is more a mat-ter of knowing than learning. When a person is taught to read and write, "the illiterate is no longer a person living on the fringe of society, a marginal man but rather a repre-sentative of the dominated strata of society, in conscious or unconscious opposition to those who, in the same structure, treat him as a thing. Thus, teaching men to read and write is no longer an inconsequential matter of ba, be, bi, bo, bu, of memorizing an alien word, but a difficult apprenticeship in naming the

SEATTLE (AP) — An unidentified man was shot and killed by police Saturday at Seattle-Tacoma International Airport, apparently in the aftermath of a kidnapping of a young

Authorities said the man; in his early 20s; was shot twice by two security guards following a struggle in an airport

Sgt. Bill Emerson said the man attempted to fire on officers as they investigated a report from a woman who told authorities she had been kidnapped in Denver, Colo. Local and FBI agents were questioning the woman, tenta tively identified as Linda Lee Sabala, in her early 20s.

In Denver, however, a spokesman for the suburban Adams County sheriff's office said authorities apparently believed the man was Timothy Russell, 25, an escapee from the Colorado State Hospital at Pueblo.

William Robertson, superintendent of operation at the airport, said the man was shot in the right chest and forehead by two airport policemen when he pulled a gun as they approached him in the parking lot.

Robertson said the police were called after a woman came to a rent-a-car counter and said she had been kidnapped from Denver two days ago.

She told officers the location of the car in which she had ridden from Denver, Robertson said. The officers confronted the man about 200 feet from the car, he said, and ordered him to halt.

"As soon as he opened his jacket and reached for a gun, they told him to halt again," Robertson said. 'He continued to draw the gun and the officers opened

Bhutto Faces Thorny Problem With Unhappy Provinces

By RALPH JOSEPH

CP Correspondent TEHRAN (CP) — Keeping the provinces in line after Pakistan's most populous one split to become Bangladesh has been President Zulfiqar Ali Bhutto's biggest headache since he assumed office in De-cember. Not that the trouble was altogether unforeseen. One argument against giving autonomy to East Pakistan was that it would lead to a demand for greater autonomy in the other provinces.

What the rulers of West Pakistan feared most was that the homeland of the Pa-thans, known as the North West Frontier Province since the time of British rule, would suddenly rise up in bloody rebellion in an attempt to form

Fears were fed on the fact that the leader of the Pakh-toonistan movement, 86-yearold Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan, also known as the "Frontier Gandhi," has been living in self-exile for almost a decade in Afghanistan, which in turn has given official support to the movement.

ARMED YOUTH

Now Ghaffar Khan's son, Khan Abdul Wali Khan, has emerged as leader of the majority party in the province, the National Awami Party (NAP). Wali Khan fanned uspicions by visiting Kabul, the Afghan capital, 'ostensibly see his ailing father. He has also made open moves to arm and reorganize the (Pakhtoon Zalma, the youth Simultaneously, trouble was simmering in the southwestern province of Baluchis tan, where Bhutto's Pakistan People's Party (PPP) had also lost out to the NAP. The difference here was that the tribal khans of Baluchistan had already once raised the flag of independence against the central government in 1958, and had been ruthlessly put down by military action. 1970, many of the of that rebellion who had been jailed for several years by the government of Ayub Khan had swept the polls under the banner of the NAP, much as Mujib Rahman had done in East Pakistan.

REBELS IN POWER

Late in April, Bhutto handed over the Baluchistan provincial government in Quetta to Baluchi NAP leaders. Two former rebels, Mir Bakhsh Bizenjo and Sardar Ataullah Khan Menbecame governor chief minister respectively.

The Baluchis were overhistory, since the British occupation of the area, that they had a semi-autonomous provincial government of their own. Another dangerous situa-tion had been defused, and the Pakistan president's reputa-tion as a clever statesman rose a peg further.

Shortly after, by tragic irony, another provincial issue exploded in Bhutto's own backyard. When his home province, Sindh, tried to adopt

Javelin Finds Major Deposit Of Copper

MONTREAL (UPI) - Canadian Javelin Ltd. says that drilling operations had located a deposit of over one billion tons of copper-molyb-denum at the company's Cerrro Colorado copper deposit in Panama.

But the company said, it was too early to determine the average grade in the deposit or its final size, although diamond drilling in a relatively small area indicated the copper deposits were of major

The area drilled thus far represents only a small part of the total area deemed favorable for exploratory drilling, the company added.

New equipment has been purchased to double the present rate of exploration.

Central bank statistics released this week show that as of Aug. 2. total currency in circulation and bank deposits held by the general public ran to $40.3 billion.

This included $4.2 billion in notes and coins in circulation, nearly $7.7 billion in demad deposits in the banks, and $28.4 billion in personal savings deposits and term and notice deposits in the banks. BIG DIFFERENCE

Bankers say that an impor tant difference exists in two kinds of bank deposits — the demand deposits which people can take out of the bank quickly if they want to spend it, and the personal savings, term and notice deposits which are for the most part long-term savings or invest-ments which people have in reserve and are reluctant to dip into for everyday use.

Currency in circulation and demand deposits are considered much more liquid, and many economists think they represent a measure of the immediate spending power of the general public. The longer-term deposit are thought to be not nearly so influential on day-to-day busi-

The Bank of Canada's summary of money supply statis-mary of money supply statis-tics for the last seven months show that between January and May this year, total money supply rose by 6.16 per cent. But in the last two months, May to July, they have risen less than half of

EXPRESS ALARM

Some economists were alarmed at the rapid rate of money supply growth. Traditionalists among them say it could not be allowed to go on proving so rapidly for the state of the growing so rapidly for an indefinite period.

While the total growth of the money supply appears to have been virtually arrested same cannot be said of the amount of currency in circulation and demand deposits in the chartered banks.

Currency and demand de-posits rose 2.6 per cent in the first four months of 1972, and if that rate were continued for the balance of the year they would show a total increase of more than eight per cent.

But they actually grew at a much faster rate in June and July than they did in February, March, April and May. In the last two months alone they increased by nearly 2.9 per cent — a rate which, if continued for 12 would run to more than 18 per cent a year.

Where is all this money? There is 14.8 per cent more cash in circulation now than a year ago, and 11.2 per cent more in demand deposits in the chartered banks

The latest report does not change the previous year's opinion of the firm's auditors that "there are significant uncertainties concerning Medicor and its wholly owned subsidiaries to continue operations on a going-concern basis."

Prime among the auditor's doubts was a 1971 year-end working capital deficiency of $8,561,674. Concern was noted a year earlier when the deficiency was $5,047,639.

Northwest Sports Enterprises; Ltd., owner of the Van-couver Canucks which is operating in the black, is no longer consolidated into Medicor's financial statements. The Minneapolis firm's 60.1 per cent block of Northwest sharts now is controlled by the Bank of B.C.

PUBLIC FORCES END TO SPRAYING

VANCOUVER (CP) - The International Boundary Commission, bowing to public pressure, decided Saturday to suspend further herbicide spraying of the Canada-United States border near Vancouver.

Carl Gustafson, field engineer for the commission, said the spraying had been suspended to avoid controversy.

Residents, who had planned to form a human chain around the chemical spraying machines today responded by calling off their planned demonstration.

The commission had planned to spray from Boundary Bay, south of Vancouver, to a point 32 miles inland. The spraying is designed to clear a 10-foot strip of land on either

With its anticipated conclu sion in the first half of next year, the sewer program will remove the final obstacle to new housing construction in suburban Saanich — lack of sanitary sewers and growing restictions on the use of septic

In four years, a total 3,681 sewer connections have been made in the program area, embracing 3,500 acres of Saanich, lying beyond the most urbanized parts of the most urbanized parts of the most property of municipality where sewers have been installed for many years.
With completion of the enterprise, Saanich will have excess sewer capacity for many more years. Two main drainage areas are involved in the program

— all the land lying west of the height of land which roughly parallels Quadra is now or will be connected to the Macaulay Point outfall; that land to the east lends itself to Finnerty Cove outfall.

The most recent contract awarded for sewer work involves the Swan Lake trunk line, a part of the Macaulay system, given last week to Excavating Ltd. for $145,000.

An estimated six contracts remain to be designated dur-ing the fall and winter to bring the program to completion, well ahead of its committed date, Dec. 31, 1973.

Three or four contracts will involve the Finnerty Cove system to bring Gordon Head district into a fully developed position. It is in this area where most of the work has been done in the sewer en-

By contrast, in June there were 90 connections made in the western part of Saanich to Macaulay Point trunks in the biggest month out of the past six. There were 438 new con-nections since the end of January for a total 783 linked to the Macaulay system.

NOT CONNECTED

A larger part of what is likely to be connected to the Macaulay system has been sewered, but the trunk lines have not yet been connected to the portion in operation.

This is the area north of Ridgeway between the height of land in the west and Lochside Rogers-Ambassador.

The unserviced part of Gordon Head district is that north of Mt. Douglas Cross Road and Feltham Road, east of Cedar Hill Road to Gordon Head and north to Mt. Douglas Park.

Design and completion of the work in the Finnerty Cove area is expected to be done during the first half of next year. This will include one major pumping station.

Since 1968 Saanich has spent more than $3 million on sewerage, not counting share of sewer contract work initiated by the Capital Regional District. It is a large sisting mainly of residential

But there is more to-come which will do much to alter some of this one-sidedness. Next year Saanich will be quired to plan and install an extension of its sewer system north to Royal Oak, where Broadmead Farms Ltd. is building a 713-acre self-contained community to contain the largest shopping centre in the capital region.

Pot-Luck Batting Order Cooks Up Tiger Triumph

Billy Martin, hoping to wake his slumping team, went with a pot-luck batting order Sunday dictated by a hat

The names came out spell-ing success for Detroit Tigers as they stopped a four-game losing streak with a 3-2 victory over Cleveland Indians in the first game of an American League doubleheader.

HONDA SELLOUT PEARSON

OAK BAY P.C. ELECTION CORNER

G. SCOTT WALLACE

After writing yesterday's column, I found it interesting to receive in the mail, the 1972 edition of "Debates of the Legislative Assembly." This is the closest record to a real Hansard we will ever have, while the present government holds office. The debate on the Succession Duty Act records my speech on page 748, ending with the statement that succession duties should be abolished. On page 749 the Premier is quoted, "That might be the new policy of the Tory party but I want to say that's the reason I left the Tory party and that's the reason the ordinary people will not vote for Tories in the next election." Isn't it rather puzzling that the Premier in his Kelowna Charter completely reverses his stand on Succession Duties, to adopt the P.C. policy he so violently denounced in the Legislature on March 13th, 1972: Indeed in the fever of election campaigning he has promised a special Session of the Legture on March 13th, 1972? Indeed in the fever of election campaigning he has promised a special Session of the Legislature, the agenda to include the abolition of Succession Duties. His performance on this issue, as on others, has been unstable and inconsistent, to say the least, but demonstrates again the vital need for a proper comprehensive Hansard, which records every word spoken in the Legislature. Only thus can the voter review and reappraise the inconsistencies, the manoeuvrings and the blatant doubletalk of many contemporary politicians. I repeat here, that the P.C. party policy endorses the abolition of Succession Duties and the introduction of an unedited Hansard.

As I move through the riding each day, knocking on doors,

As I move through the riding each day, knocking on doors, certain topics are mentioned repeatedly. On two such topics, the P.C. policy is clear; IT WILL CONTINUE THE HOMEOWNER GRANT AND WILL FIND METHODS TO IMPROVE AND ENLARGE THE FERRY SERVICE. Long waits of several hours duration for Island residents during the summer months are unacceptable, particularly during the summer months are unacceptable, particularly for businessmen. Vancouver Island residents should be given some preference in their access to ferry service. A Bad Day in Hospital -The Day You Come Out

A somewhat frightening thing happened to me after I'd been a month in hospital. I began to like it. Every other day I'd ask my doctor when I could go home. "Look," I would say, lurching about dramatically on my one good leg. "I'm fit as a fiddle." It was only when I began to feel a deep, furtive surge of relief at his refusal that it grabbed me. I liked the place me. I liked the place.

Shouldn't have surprised me all that much, I suppose. Mrs. Harding had spoken of it several times in our occasional discussions of the psychology of the ill or the wounded. When she was on the night shift Mrs. Harding would bring me my last rye-and-ginger of the day at about 10 o'clock. The lights in the ward would be out then. If Mrs. Harding wasn't too busy she'd stay awhile. We'd look out on the bright lamps of Fort Street, out there to the free world, and talk about the courage and the cowardie, the stoic acceptance and unstoic rage, the whole bizarre, unpredictable reaction of people stricken one way or the other.

Some of the younger nurses weren't too happy about bringing me my rye-and-ginger. The internal specialist had prescribed a whopping daily nine ounces—three before lunch, three before dinner three at highly out. To keen the weight three before dinner, three at light's out. To keep the veins open, the healer said. Myself, I considered it a good alternative to using a Schick Injector, but one or two of the students thought it a bit much. "Next thing you know," sniffed one, bringing me my pre-dinner libation, "we'll be having topless

Mrs. Harding, English and a woman of the world, saw nothing denigrating in the unaccustomed barmaid's role and I came to look forward to our talks. So it was I learned that many patients, however much they may have dreaded hospitalization, come to think of it as a sanctuary. Indeed, some, on being given a firm date when they'll be sprung back into the bosoms of their family, almost instantly have a relapse.

My own delight on being released, putting on my pants for the first time in a month, saying goodbye to the three room-mates whose lives I'd shared so intimately, trying to put into genuine words the graftude I felt to those fine girls and women in white, lasted only until the hospital door closed behind me. Suddenly, inexplicably, I felt more vulnerable than I had ever in my life before. Mrs. Harding had seen patients go into a kind of shock at this abrupt transition. That was it exactly what are you thinking?" my wife asked, reading my change of mood, as we drove away.

"I'm wondering," I replied, "what life we be ke without a nurse waking me at six o'clock in the morning to ask me about my bowel movements."

I had joked about that with my visitors—one morning I'd asked the nurse about her bowel movements, to the cheers of my room-mates— and we'd joked, too, about the way hospitals are, waking men from a deep sleep to give them sleeping pills, all those arbitrary disciplines that seem calculated to infuriate the patient.

calculated to infuriate the patient.

Yet new I saw that it was precisely that ordered routine. the security that comes from the absolute certainty of your day, that I'd miss the most.

It isn't just the comforting thought that you're in the heart of a huge system ready at any moment to cope with an emergency, that a button, lying beside your pillow, needs only to be thumbed to summon, help, though that is part of

Deeper still is the sense of continuity that requires no Deeper still is the sense of continuity that requires no decision-making, no initiative, nothing more, really, than submitting to care. The thing that has cut you down may weigh on your mind. You may chafe at the routine (why awaken you at six when the breakfast tray will not arrive until eight?). But everything that is done is done for you, a child-like luxury that is, above all else, pampering and protective.

Unnoticed, a whole new set of values, hospital values, become values to live by.

In a room down the hall from ours an elderly patient worked a jigsaw puzzle each day. Each day his wife brought him a 400-piece puzzle. It took him an average of six hours to assemble them on the plywood board he had for the purpose. Then one day his wife brought him a 750-piece puzzle. So began the great sweepstake. All of us in the hospital's centre block made our guesses, paid our 25 cents for a ticket. The bombs were bursting in Belfast, the systematic destruction of the property of the purpose of the tion of North Vietnam continued, the whole cockeyed world spun on, but the progress of that jigsaw was all that mat-tered. (The poor fellow was on his eighteenth hour when the lottery was called off by unanimous vote.)

There was the day, too, about a week after I had started the painful process of re-learning to walk, when I made it all the way down the corridors to the farthest point of the north wing without once crashing. Hillary on the summit of

Again, when the sickest man in our room made that tremendous leap from intravenous feeding to taking solids, a leap for life, really, the unspoken elation in that room could only be described as the emotive reaction of a closed community. Oak Bay Tory Implies SC Win Likely he made Sunday to a rally of supporters at Cadboro Bay, Wallace confirmed in a tele-phone interview that he had predicted that the Hon. Phil Gaglardi, "will indeed be the next premier of British Co-lumbia when Premier Bennett steps down." Wallace said that having been on the "inside" of the Social Credit Party before joining the Conservatives in January, there is no doubt in his mind that Gaglardi will be "the next Premier" despite what his Socred colleagues in the government wish.

"The grass roots of the party will choose Gaglardi as the next leader, not the Social Credit MLAs," he said.

DELEGATES CHOICE

"I have attended two provincial Socred conventions and the only man next to the premier himself to turn on the delegates with his magnetism is Gaglardi. He gets them excited and worked up to such a pitch, it's inevitable they'll choose him for their leader when the time comes

Wallace added that no party knows better than Social Credit, "the grass roots can-not be ignored."

But there are also polka-dot clogs, striped clogs, clogs in suede, ankle-strap clogs and boot clogs. Some clogs sport heels as high as six inches.

The accent is on the bottom parts of shoes generally. At the trade events at Elda, Bologna, London and Duesseldorf, the major talking points were the soles, heels and units.

The most important volume trend in women's shoes is undoubtedly the platform sole.

This began as a wafer-thin effect but soon became a sub-stantial sole, replacing the wedge which had a fairly short life.

Like the clogs, platforms also reach six-inch heel heights in some cases.

Carrying suspicious-looking satchels and cases, they made their quiet way into the University of Victoria's Mac-Laurin Building all last week, unchecked by security

But there was no need for alarm — this group of stu-dents was more interested in rhythm than revolution. Their oddly shaped cases held nothmore deadly than a krummhorn, rackett, or shawm, with the occasional lute or viol thrown in for good

The students had enrolled in an early music workshop conducted by Dr. Christine Mather, director of the university's Collegium Musicum and founder of the disbanded Manitoba Concert.

To the uninitiated, the krummhorn sounds like a lovesick B.C. ferry. A group of them can make almost as much racket as a rackett (an early form of oboe).

Half of the 82 students registered for the workshop came from the western and and midwest United States. Many were members of music faculties at other universities and

Last Thursday, Palmer was thoroughly enjoying his class for recorders. His enthusiasm for the music couldn't help but rub off on students.

"You're going to have to give up all your preconceived ideas that a gavotte should be slow and stately," he told a student performer. "You just can't play this gavotte that way. It's much too bright and cheerful," said Palmer.

1 pkg. granular yeast ¼ c. lukewarm water 1 tsp. sugar (first amount) ¾ c. scalded milk

½ c. margarine ¼ c. sugar (second amount)

1 tsp. salt 3 c. sifted all-purpose flour

1/2 tsp. yellow food coloring

About ¼ c. pineapple or peach jam or marmalade
In large beater bowl, soak the yeast in the lukewarm

To the scalded milk add the margarine; ½ cup sugar and sait and stir until dissolved and lukewarm. Add to risen yeast liquid along with the food coloring; 1½ cups sifted flour and the egg and beat on medium speed for five markets, stopping beaters and scraping down sides of bowl two or three times during the beating.

Remove beating.

Remove beaters, add remaining 1½ cups flour and mix in with strong metal spoon until perfectly blended. Cover and let rise at room temperature until doubled.

Punch down dough. Cut it in half on well floured board. Roll out half to 12" square. Brush with melted butter. Roll up tightly like a jelly roll. Cut into 12 even pinwheels. Place, cut side up, in buttered 2½" muffin tins.

Hot Line Helps Troubled

President Nixon has a hot line to the Kremlin which can be used quickly to straighten out dangerous misunderstandings that could start a war. Now in Denver, Colo., a group of fine young people have got a good idea for using a hot line to help troubled young people when they feel that they have nowhere to turn in an

For the last four years, the young people at the Hip Help Centre have maintained three phone lines, over which volunteers have listened to the troubles, worries and doubts of more than 15,000 callers seeking information, advice, comfort, or just someone to talk to because they were lonely.

The group was founded in 1968 by Joe Arnold, a minister, as part of Reach Out, a non-profit corporation. The group now includes 50 volunteer physicians, nurses and medical students who are on the phone day and night, six days a week.

Most of the callers are in their late teens. Many are "street people," living on the hippie fringe, youngsters who have left home and severed all contacts with their families. Some want a "crash pad," an apartment or house where they can sleep at night for little or no money. Many are lonely, scared, physically ill, or on a bad drug trip. Sometimes they are looking for a ride to call the contact of the conta to California. Usually, they have no one else to call.

There are a number of these centres in several cities of this country and they are much needed.

In Life magazine recently, Assistant Editor Karen Thorren

told of the Denver Hip Help Centre and described some of the calls received. One person, a younger soldier recently back from Vietnam, was troubled because he could feel no pride in having served in the Army. His parents were proud of his having received a Purple Heart, but he felt generally depressed about everything and could not find anything to make him happy. He had turned to smoking marijuana and listening to music.

Another caller was a young man with a compulsion to make Another caller was a young man with a compulsion to make obscene phone calls, and he wanted help with this problem. Another young man wanted help in finding his sister, who had run away from home. Another chap had a terrible headache after taking drugs. He wanted help in "coming down" off a drug-induced "high." One girl who called was distressed because she had lost all rapport with her mother.

One cirl had run away from home and had tried to commit.

had lost all rapport with her mother.

One girl had run away from home and had tried to commit suicide after she felt that her life was hopelessly complicated. She had taken an overdose of sleeping pills after she had become seriously involved in heavy drugs and her husband had been arrested. The Hip Help Centre had received a call from the girl's family, worried because they had not heard from her in months. When the people from the centre traced her to a tiny fleabag apartment, she lay disheveled on a dirty mattress, dying of an overdose of drugs. The volunteers helped her to become reconciled with her mother and to go home to Arizona, Later, she wrote to the centre, "You people are so incredibly heautiful. I'll never forget your help."

The occasion was a preview of the 6,300-square-foot Chinese Pavilion at the Canadian National Exhibition, which of-

Teen-Age Love Spat Leads to Shootings

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) A 17 year-old Angus youth was charged Sunday night with counts of non-capital murder after his father and another man were shot dead and a 15-year-old girl abduct-ed in her night clothes Sunday morning.

Police said Barry Blackier was arrested, and the girl rescued, about 1:30 p.m. near Toronto. Blackier is to be taken to Barrie to appear in court today.

Dead are Wilfred Barry-Blackier, 46, and Robert George Knight, 36, father of the abducted girl, Gwendolyn

In the agricultural section are displayed cigarettes and wines, along with foodstuffs and a scale model of one of China's proudest accomplishments-the Tachai project in Shanshi Province where an agriculture, forestry and pro-duction area has been built in a previously barren area.

High Temperatures Now Start Winter Flowers

House plants subjected to temperatures of 80 and 90 degrees F. during this summer are likely to surprise you with their response this coming winter and next spring.

Crassulas, for instance, which have never flowered before may produce buds and flowers during December. The Chinese-jade (Crassula argentea) will bloom every winter if given heat up to 100 degrees F. in summer followed by cooler, dryer conditions in the house during winter.

The summer heat indoors this year may also be a stimulus for cacti which bloom at Christmas, if they have been given sufficient watering. The period of partial withdrawal of watering is coming from Sept. 15 to Oct. 15; this initiates formation of buds. They become visible as tiny dots at the outer extreme of the flat growths we call leaves but are, botanically, stems. By the end-of-October you can just see the buds.

During November and December the buds develop in size and color if the plants are given moderate watering and are in a part of the room not directly in line with artificial lighting for evening

An unusually hot summer here has been known to bring a Sanseviera into bloom in the late fall. I have seen this only once, after the hot summer of 1958.

The flower stem of Sanseviera trifasciata, the gold-banded Snake-plant, appears in the central "vase" of leaves. It grows rapidly to about 15 inches, branching near the top. The flowers are quite abundant, a creamy white, with narrow petals making the effect of large white spiders at the tips of the little branches.

The strong citrus perfume is a pleasant surprise while the flowers are at their best.

Even more surprising is the flowering of Monstera deliciosa, the large leaved Philodendron. The owner of this usually only leafy house plant never really believes the evidence when a huge flower bud is seen to be developing.

related, are members of the Araceae family, to which all arums belong, so the flowers take the same form of a wide white spathe sheltering a thick spadix crowded with minute

In their natural habitat of South Mexico and Central America the spadix ripens into a solid edible fruit. .

In other genera of the same Araceae family such as Caladium, Anthurium, Dieffenbachia, the spathes may be green, purple, pink or scarlet.

Normally, declarer's attitude in a trump contract is to view his own hand as the supreme one, and the dummy's hand as the secondary, or supplementary one. When he looks over his losing tricks, he point of his own hand. And in the great majority of all deals, this approach is the correct one.

But there are certain situations in which the declarer's hand should be viewed as the secondary holding of the part-nership, and the declarer hould transpose himself to think of the exposed hand as of play required is known as

A heart was now led to dummy's ace, and this was followed by the cashing of dummy's ace of spades, picking up East's last trump. On the ace of spades, South dis-carded his six of hearts. The rest of the tricks were his.

As he played the hand, South ruffed three clubs in his own hand, and made three trump tricks in the North hand. This added to six winners. The ace and king of hearts, plus four diamonds brought the total to twelve

Had the adversely-held trumps been divided 4-1 (instead of 3-2), the dummyreversal play would have been unsuccessful. But, then, way to fulfill the slam conmal division of the five outstanding trumps.

OTTAWA (CP) - The federal government said today it is suspending the use of the controversial drug DES in cattle pending the further

The health and agriculture departments said that the drug, widely used to promote the growth of cattle, will be suspended effective Jan. 1.

The United States recently banned the use of the drug because it has caused cancer in rats. Canada did not immediately follow suit.

The Canadian action came after a non-governmental group made the rather confus-ing conclusion that there is no danger to health from DES but there is a potential for harm from its use.

It recommended additional experimental information on it and that is the reason for the suspension from Jan. 1. The U.S. ban is effective Jan.

A Bad Day in Hospital -The Day You Come Out

A somewhat frightening thing happened to me after Fd been a month in hospital. I began to like it. Every other day I'd ask my doctor when I could go home. "Look," I would say, lurching about dramatically on my one good leg. "I'm fit as a fiddle." It was only when I began to feel a deep, furtive surge of relief at his refusal that it grabbed me I liked the place me. I liked the place.

Shouldn't have surprised me all that much, I suppose. Mrs. Harding had spoken of it several times in our occasional discussions of the psychology of the ill or the wounded. When she was on the night shift Mrs. Harding would bring me my last rye-and-ginger of the day at about 10 o'clock. The lights in the ward would be out then, If Mrs. Harding wasn't too busy she'd stay awhile. We'd look out on the bright lamps of Fort Street, out there to the free world, and talk about the courage and the cowardice, the stoic acceptance and unstoic rage, the whole bizarre, unpredictable reaction of people stricken one way or the other.

rage, the whole bizarre, unpredictable reaction of people stricken one way or the other.

Some of the younger nurses weren't too happy about bringing me my rye-and-ginger. The internal specialist had prescribed a whopping daily nine ounces—three before lunch, three before dinner, three at light's out. To keep the yeins open, the healer said. Myself, I considered it a good alternative to using a Schick Injector, but one or two of the students thought it a bit much. "Next thing you know," sniffed one, bringing me my pre-dinner libation, "we'll be having topless nurses."

Mrs. Harding, English and a woman of the world, saw nothing denigrating in the unaccustomed barmaid's role and I came to look forward to our talks. So it was I learned that many patients, however much they may have dreaded hospitalization, come to think of it as a sanctuary. Indeed, some, on being given a firm date when they'll be sprung back into the bosoms of their family, almost instantly have a relapse.

My own delight on being released, putting on my pants for the first time in a month, saying goodbye to the three room-mates whose lives I'd shared so intimately, trying to put into genuine words the gratitude I felt to those fine girls and women in white, lasted only until the hospital door closed behind me. Suddenly, inexplicably, I felt more vulnerable than I had ever in my life before. Mrs. Harding had seen patients go into a kind of shock at this abrupt transition. That was it exactly.

"What are you thinking?" my wife asked, reading my change of mood, as we drove away.

"I'm wondering," I replied, "what life will be like without a nurse waking me at six o'clock in the morning to ask me about my bowel movements." ask me about my bowel movements."

I had joken about that with my visitors — one morning I'd asked the nurse about her bowel movements, to the cheers of my room-mates — and we'd joked, too, about the way hospitals are, waking men from a deep sleep to give them sleeping pills, all those arbitrary disciplines that seem calculated to infuriate the patient.

Yet now I saw that it was precisely that ordered routine, the security that comes from the absolute certainty of your day that I'd miss the most.

day, that I'd miss the most.

It isn't just the comforting thought that you're in the heart of a huge system ready at any moment to cope with an emergency, that a button, lying beside your pillow, needs only to be thumbed to summon help, though that is part of

Deeper still is the sense of continuity that requires no Deeper still is the sense of continuity that requires no decision-making, no initiative, nothing more, really, than submitting to care. The thing that has cut you down may weigh on your mind. You may chafe at the routine (why awaken you at six when the breakfast tray will not arrive until eight?). But everything that is done is done for you, a child-like luxury that is, above all else, pampering and protective.

Unnoticed, a whole new set of values, hospital values, herome values to live by become values to live by.

In a room down the hall from ours an elderly patient worked a jigsaw puzzle each day. Each day his wife brought him a 400-piece puzzle. It took him an average of six hours to asseinable them on the plywood board he had for the purpose. Then one day his wife brought him a 750-piece puzzle. So began the great sweepstake. All of us in the hospital's centre block made our guesses, paid our 25 cents for a ticket. The bombs were bursting in Belfast, the systematic destruction of North Vietnam continued, the whole cockeyed world spun on, but the progress of that jigsaw was all that mattered. (The poor fellow was on his eighteenth hour when the lottery was called off by unanimous vote.)

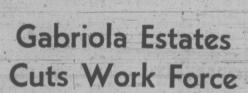

There was the day, too, about a week after I had started the painful process of re-learning to walk, when I made it all the way down the corridors to the farthest point of the north wing without once crashing. Hillary on the summit of Everest could have felt no greater sense of accomplishment.

Again, when the sickest man in our room made that tremendous leap from intravenous feeding to taking solids, a leap for life, really, the unspoken elation in that room could only be described as the emotive reaction of a closed community. Out there human life might not amount to much. In here

So came that morning when the doctor had said yes, I could go home the next day. When he left I lay back on my freshly-made bed, looking out at the real and earnest world yet strangely detached from it. At my bedside were five great books still to be read. My medicinal rye-and-ginger would be along at any minute. Then the lunch, so surprisingly good. Then I probably would have a nap on the sunlit bed until the visitors began to come at three.

I knew at that precise moment that it was time I left hos-

Oak Bay Tory Implies SC Win Likely

Oak Bay Progressive Con-scrvative candidate Dr. Scott Wallace implied today the Socreds will again form the provincial government after the Aug. 30th election.

Commenting on a statement he made Sunday to a rally of supporters at Cadboro Bay, Wallace confirmed in a tele phone interview that he had predicted that the Hon. Phil Gaglardi, "will indeed be the next premier of British Columbia when Premier Bennett

Wallace said that having been on the "inside" of the Social Credit Party before joining the Conservatives in January, there is no doubt in his mind that Gaglardi will be "the next Premier" despite what his Socred colleagues in the government wish,

The grass roots of the party will choose Gaglardi as the next leader, not the Social Credit MLAs," he said.

DELEGATES CHOICE

"I have attended two pro-vincial Socred conventions and the only man next to the premier himself to turn on the delegates with his magnetism is Gaglardi. He gets them excited and worked up to such a pitch, it's inevitable they'll choose him for their leader when the time comes.

when the time comes."

Wallace added that no party knows better than Social Credit, "the grass roots cannot be ignored."

Independent candidate for Saanich and the Islands, Jack McKenzie, said in a letter to provincial labor leader James Chabot today that the government's policy of providing a ment's policy of providing a "fair" solution is probably the most important factor contri-buting to the poor labor situation in this province.

"Difficulties between labor and management should be approached pragmatically," McKenzie said in his letter. "Bill 33 established a permanent mediation commission. Once these mediators acquire the necessary experience, they will be able to assess the power relationship in a particular dispute."

ONE BODY URGED

Total regional government has been proposed by one candidate. Cowichan-Malahat Liberal contender Danny Clements, told a garden party at Duncan Saturday that, local governments should be the regional districts."

He said that this move will do away with duplication of services, administration and

Progressive Conservative candidate for Esquimalt, John Williams said Saturday he is appalled at the lack of any real progress in providing ex-tended care hospital beds in the riding four years after passage of the $9 million ref-

Addressing a coffee party at Sooke, Williams promised full co-operation with the Juan de Fuca Hospital Board in commencing construction of a

When an official record fails to record a significant portion of what in fact occurred, then it is incomplete, inadequate, and unacceptable according to Liberal candidate in Oak Bay, Mel Couvelier.

"Last week, the Hansard, or record of debate of the last legislative session was released," he told supporters at his headquarters today, "and the document of 1,000 pages does not carry a full account of the all-night sessions from Feb. 24th to noon Feb. 25th, for 15 hours and 40 minutes.

EASY ALTERNATIVE

"By purporting falsely to be a complete record, the government is doing the people of British Columbia a disservice," he said.

Continuing his shopping centre campaign over the weekend, Liberal candidate for Saanich and the Islands Malcolm Anderson said the campaign is emerging as a choice between Phil Galardi, who wants Bennett's job, and Liberal leader David Ander-

"When put in those terms," Anderson said, "the people canvassed are very quick to support David Anderson and his Liberal candidates."

The issue of the B.C. Ferry system was mentioned Satur-day morning by New Democratic Party candidate for Co-wichan-Malahat at a coffee party in Cassidy

REDUCED FARES

He called for reduced fares for residents of Vancouver Island, as is provided for residents who use the Powell River-Vancouver ferries.

"There should be a late-night ferry from Vancouver, based in Nanaimo. This would allow the last run to leave Horseshoe Bay at midnight and would transfer 120 jobs to Vancouver Island."

Strachan also called for a complete system of ferry reservations.

"Right now by the end of each day, all the people who have been waiting for hours eventually get moved by the time the last run is complete. With a reservation system, patrons would arrive at the ferries in time to go aboard,"

Candidates of all parties in the forthcoming provincial election are being poiled by Saanich Chamber of Commerce for views on a proposed emergency helicopter service for southern Vancouver Island. The chamber favors a fulltime rescue and ambulance service capable of marine and remote mountain rescue mis-

In May the chamber sent a resolution to federal transport minister Don Jamieson with a copy to B.C. health minister Ralph Loffmark asking for a jointly sponsored helicopter

Socreds Labelled Rich Man's Party

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett today began a campaign swing on Vancouver Island, attracting about 100 people to Victoria's Centennial speech to pensioners, and later walked down the lunch line at the Silver Thrtads centre next to the square.

The New Democrat leader said the Social Credit Government's main aim was to please the rich, proved by promised removal of the proincial gift tax and succession duties. "That's what Social Credit is all about," he said, "pleas-ing the rich."

"It's about time we did omething for the people who built this province—the senior

Everyone talks about the election in terms of the four provincial leaders. Everything else is fluff, fluff, fluff, and blah, blah,
